3 TECHNIQUES TO AVOID PLAGIARISM

While conducting your research, you might find that others have developed similar ideas.

There could be another researcher who may have

Devised an investigative technique

Described the natural history of a disease

Discovered the structure of a compound

Described an unchanging process

This technique by Smith et. al. has been described perfectly. I can't possibly explain it better than them. Can I reuse this work as it is?

Absolutely NOT! This is extremely unethical!

If you use the existing ideas, words, or work of another person, without giving them due credit, you are plagiarizing their work.

So what if I want to use part of another researcher's work? Is there an ethical way to do this?

YES! And there's more than one way to avoid plagiarism!

Here are 3 things you could do:

Quote

Use the exact same words as the original

The quoted sentence must be enclosed within double quotes ("...") or set apart from the rest of the text as a block quotation

Paraphrase

Rewrite the original ideas in your own words

The paraphrased sentence must only match the source document in terms of meaning, not exact words

Summarize

Put the original ideas into your own words

The summarized text must provide a short overview of the source text and be much shorter than the original version
