The effect of oxygen depletion on renal lipid peroxidation was investigated in perfused rat kidney. Oxygen depletion was accomplished by administration of 0.05 U uricase and 0.1 U superoxide dismutase in the perfusate. During O<sub>2</sub>-depleted perfusion, renal lipid peroxidation was significantly increased. This was seen as early as 30 min after the onset of O<sub>2</sub>-depletion and reached a plateau at 60 min. The increased lipid peroxidation was prevented by the simultaneous administration of N-acetylcysteine. The results indicate that O<sub>2</sub>-depletion causes renal lipid peroxidation. The data also suggest that lipid peroxidation occurs prior to protein oxidation during renal ischemia. Retinoic acid and the adult period of hippocampal neurogenesis: effects on the generation of new neurons and on neuronal maturation. Adult hippocampal neurogenesis appears to be a crucial process responsible for cognitive and emotional functions and several pathological conditions. Hippocampal neurogenesis can be stimulated in adult mammals by environmental cues and molecules. All-trans-retinoic acid (RA) has recently been shown to increase hippocampal neurogenesis, and is considered an effective agent for some psychiatric disorders characterized by memory impairment and cognitive decline. However, the mechanism(s) of action of RA in the adult hippocampus is not fully known, as has been the case for many years for its effects in the embryonal brain. As part of a screening for an effect of RA on neurogenesis in the adult rat hippocampus, which has been reported by us and others, we found that RA has a potent activity to stimulate the survival of newly generated cells. In the present study, we have tested the effect of RA on the generation of newborn hippocampal granule neurons in adult rats and studied its effect on three markers of neuronal maturation: the emergence of new dendritic spines (four to six weeks), the enhancement of the expression of the transient vesicular glutamate transporter (T-VGLUT) (eight to nine weeks) and the maturation of the expression of the first phase form of the calcium-binding protein, parvalbumin (PV), in Gol
